Dear Jane Henney:

I am writing you at this time, because of my extreme concern about the genetically engineered crops that until now, I didn't realize have already and for some time, been infiltrated into our regular buying systems: supermarkets and prepared foods.

I cannot tell you how deeply this affects me, knowing that a bleak future lies ahead with such manipulation of crops. All people have a right to know and choose for themselves, what they are buying and eating.

I urge you to promote every effort you have at your disposal to ensure that labeling of all items is mandated, and that steps are made to allow more time to investigate the long term affects of this kind of practice, before allowing it to be proliferated on our planet. I trust that this communication will touch your heart and conscious.

I have included an excerpt of some information that has been generated on the web, and of which I agree with.

The Food and Drug Administration wants to know what you think of bioengineered foods!

Write to FDA Commissioner Jane Henney to demand that genetically engineered foods be subject to mandatory pre-market safety testing and labeling.

Mandatory Labeling and a Moratorium

Mothers for Natural Law spent last year collecting signatures for mandatory labeling. We already presented about half a million to Congress and intend to bring that number to a million. However, labels will be redundant if the proliferation of these crops is not halted. Therefore, we are calling for an immediate moratorium of the release of any further genetically engineered organisms into the environment until safety protocols can be put in place to
